WORKSHOP DESCRIPTION:

Small group instruction is the goal of most elementary teachers, however, the reality raises two critical questions: "How will I successfully manage a station framework?" AND "What resources are available that don't require hours of preparation?"

Even our young Kansans can demonstrate independence and perseverance in a station framework where students move when a task is completed, rather than transitioning with a timer. Participants will experience quality literacy tasks aligned to the foundational and language standards for grades K-5. Participants will also receive six sets of literacy task cards - useful for station activities in their classrooms as well as teacher-guided instruction and intervention.

PRESENTER: Jane Seward

Jane's dedication to the teaching profession finds her serving as a literacy consultant at ESSDACK, an educational service center based in Hutchinson, Kansas. She facilitates learning in Pathways to Reading, LETRS (Language Essentials for Teachers of Reading and Spelling), and assists districts with data interpretation and instructional planning. Jane is frequently contacted for topics such as decoding and language comprehension strategies and is at her best when collaborating with educators. Her presentation style is informal, interactive, and enthusiastic. Classroom examples, lively discussion, and questioning strategies keep learners engaged and in the moment.
