Workshop Description:

Ready to give students the skills to maximize online research in half the time? Imagine quickly identifying quality resources that are age appropriate, images that are better suited for class presentations, archived newspaper articles, and an extensive non-fiction ebook library in a matter of seconds. This hands-on session will provide you the student scaffolds for effective online research and place your classroom on the fast track to better Googling.

Presenter:

Dyane Smokorowski is the 2013 Kansas Teacher of the Year and is currently serving as an Instructional Technology Coach in the Andover Public schools. Mrs. Smoke, as she’s known to her students, believes in a project-based, student-centered classroom that helps students build skills in communication, planning, research and project implementation. She wants her students to develop a love for literature, communication and technology, but also to understand how to use that love and passion to advance their own future, as well as that of their community.
